Subject: A possible sloution to notification on drilling

After thinking about the discussion surrounding the notification on drilling, I think that when the gas and oil companies send you the notification that THEY should also notify the county involved and the landowner (especially the split estate owner) in the time period identified. Put the responsibility on the industry to make that notification. I am looking into other states rules on that procedure. I don't think that notification on the 3 phases of drilling are necessary for any notification except for your purposes. Mary Sue
